COUNTY CONVENTION HERE LAST SATURDAY

Small But Enthusiastic Gathering—Weather Threatening.

The Republicans of Ohio County met in mass convention at the Court House, Saturday the 28th, in a small, though enthusiastic gathering. The weather was threatening and gloomy throughout the whole day, which necessarily prevented a number from attending. Several came on the afternoon passenger, getting here just about the time the Convention adjourned.

The Convention was called to order by County Chairman E. G. Barrass and after the reading of the official call by Secretary W. S. Tinsley, they were unanimously elected as chairman and secretary, respectively, of the Convention.

Upon motion the Chair appointed Otto C. Martin, M. F. Chumley, O. R. Tinsley, J. W. Kirk and Cal. P. Keown as members of a committee on resolutions. While the Convention was awaiting the report of the Resolutions Committee, short talks were made by County Attorney A. D. Kirk, J. M. Johnson and others.

Following are the resolutions as reported and unanimously adopted:

RESOLUTIONS

To the Republicans of Ohio County, assembled in mass convention at the Court House in Hartford, Ky., on February 28, 1920; your committee on resolutions, this day appointed by the chairman of this convention, hereby submit the following resolutions, to-wit:

1st: We endorse the call of the State Central Committee for the County, District and State conventions to select delegates and alternates to the National Convention and other necessary officers.

We point with pride to our new administration headed by Governor Edwin P. Morrow, and hereby unqualifiedly endorse his administration and his acts, and especially commend his courageous stand taken in the enforcement of law and order, and in his honest efforts to economize in the administration of the state's government and to do away with useless and extravagant offices, and to have enacted such laws as will take our state out of the mire of politics and put it on a level with other progressive states.

2nd: We hereby endorse the stand taken by the Republican Senators of the United States on the peace treaty and especially endorse the reservations adopted by the foreign relations committee and urged by the Republican Senators, and we condemn the arbitrary, undemocratic and autocratic attitude of President Wilson in relation to the peace treaty, and especially condemn the extravagance of the present national administration. The Republican party at all times is against one man power either in national, state or local politics.

3rd: We heartily commend the services of our present representative in the Kentucky legislature, Hon. I. S. Mason, and we specifically and unanimously endorse his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congressman from the Fourth District, and urge all Republicans in this county to use all honorable methods to secure his nomination.

4th: We also take pleasure in endorsing the record of our State Senator, Hon. George W. Baker, and commend him for his faithful efforts to serve his constituency in the state senate.

5th: We recommend that our delegates to both the District and State conventions to be held at Elizabethtown, March 2nd, and at Louisville, March 3rd, respectively, be instructed to vote as a unit upon all questions coming up in either convention.

6th: We further recommend that said delegates go to said District and State Conventions uninstructed, but that they cast their votes for delegates and alternate delegates to the National Convention, District Elector, Chairman of the District Committee and other officers that are to be elected, for those Republicans who in their opinion are the most deserving, and who reflect most credit on both the district and party, provided, however, that in the event there should be before either the District or State convention a candidate for either of said places from Ohio County, then we recommend that our delegates vote as a unit for such candidate or candidates.

7th: We recommend that the following named be appointed as delegates and alternate delegates to attend the District Convention at Elizabethtown on March 2, 1920, and the State Convention at Louisville, on March 3, 1920, as follows, to-wit:

BECKHAM WILL VOTE FOR TREATY AMENDED

Courier-Journal.

In response to a telegram from The Courier-Journal, urging immediate ratification of the Peace Treaty with or without reservations Senator J. C. W. Beckham, of Kentucky yesterday wired that he was in thorough accord with this stand even if the so-called Lodge reservations had to be accepted.

The message to which Senator Beckham replied follows:

"The Courier-Journal, an ardent supporter of the Treaty unmodified, today urges Democratic Senators to ratify at once, even with the Lodge reservations if they can do no better. It protests against prolonging the present restless situation and state of war until another Senate meets, with doubtful results, March 4, next year."

Senator Beckham's telegram follows:

"In reply to your telegram, I wish to say that it is my purpose to vote for ratification of the Peace Treaty even if the so-called Lodge reservations are adopted.

"I believe it far better to ratify the Treaty, notwithstanding those reservations, than to keep the whole question in suspense any longer.

"When the Treaty was before the Senate last November I favored its adoption without reservations, but it has become evident that it cannot be ratified without reservations, and I am now voting with those who are trying to make the reservations as satisfactory as possible, and then ratifying the Treaty.

"It should be ratified at the earliest possible date, and I have earnestly favored prompt action by the Senate, without so much discussion and delay. I, therefore, approve the position stated in your telegram to me."

RAILROAD SERVICE VERY MUCH IMPROVED

The service over the local M. H. & E. R. R. in so far as passenger traffic is concerned, is considerably in advance of what it was a short time ago. The traveling public has two opportunities to go either way, each day, though we must say the schedule maintained by the mixed train is very poor.

It is utterly impossible to maintain regularly, owing to the great amount of work the train is called upon to do. We realize that it is impossible to run a train to suit all of us, but when the interest of the majority is served there can be no just kick by the individual because it does not happen to suit his convenience.

It is true that the regular passenger passes through the Southern portion of the County rather early for that section, being due at Centertown at 6 A. M., but to set it back, so we are informed, connection with the train at Elkmitch, for Louisville could not be made.

We are not capable of advising, but if the mixed train could be started from Elkmitch something like an hour later, travel for the County Seat and other points west of this place, from the Horse Branch, Friedland, Olaton and Narrows section could come out on the I. C. to the crossing and connect with the mixed train, and quite a bit would be added to the passenger traffic of the local road by the change. This would still give that train plenty of time to connect with the L. N. morning trains at Moorman.

At any rate we congratulate the L. N. on the improved service, and the people, that they have it.

ALONZO BARTLETT

Mr. Alonzo Bartlett died at his home in Owensboro, last Saturday, of influenza and pneumonia, after an illness of short duration. The remains were brought to this County and buried at Union Grove, his former home, in the Taffy country.

Mr. Bartlett was a son of Mr. D. B. Bartlett, now deceased.

A CORRECTION

The tale on the cow and calves appearing in our last issue, page one, column five, was on the wrong man's cow. We erroneously reported it as being W. W. or "Bill" Hatler's cow, when it should have been Joe Hatler. We had a letter from Bill denying the charge, hence we make this correction to set him and his cow right before the world.

BILL TO LEGALIZE HANGING KILLED

Frankfort, Ky., March 3.—With Lieutenant Governor Ballard casting the deciding vote the Senate late yesterday afternoon killed the bill of Senator Jap Harlan, Boyle county, providing for the hanging in the county in which the crime was committed of any person convicted of criminal assault. The vote was 17 to 16.

In casting the deciding vote Lieutenant Governor Ballard said that he did not believe that the passage of the bill would lessen the number of such crimes, and expressed the opinion that public hanging would be a backward step.

Other bills passed during the day include the following:

That of Charles M. Harris, Woodford County, providing for an appropriation for tuberculosis hospitals of an amount equal to 10 per cent of the amounts expended for such purposes in the various tuberculosis hospital districts; that of J. A. Hinkle, Nelson County, empowering St. Catherine of Sienna Academy to confer academic degrees; the bill of S. L. Marshall, Henderson County, consolidating the office of Sheriff and Jailer, except in Jefferson and Fayette Counties; that of H. T. Morris, Greenup County, providing for an educational survey of the State with a view to ascertaining what aids Kentucky's school system; the bill of William A. Perry, Louisville; regulating the business of dead animal contractors; that of J. D. Whittaker, Morgan County, so amending the antipass act that school trustees may ride free of charge, and the bill of Frank Rives, Christian County, aimed at trespassing by chickens of the feathered variety.

Senator Eric Harris, of Ashland, is working for his bill which revises the Normal School system of the State and establishes an Eastern Normal School at Louisa, Lawrence County. The intention is to make the Richmond School the Central and the Bowling Green institution the Western department. Senator Harris has made a good foundation for what ultimately seems certain to be adopted, as it has the approval of Superintendent Colvin and other educators.

GOING SOUTH

Dundee, March 1st. 1920.
Dear Mr. Tinsley:—I have sold two of my gilts, through my ad in the Republican, to E. W. Smith, of Repton, Ky.; one sow and eight pigs to C. S. Rowe, Centertown, and one gilt to L. M. Benton, Wysox. You can run the ad in this week's edition and stop. I am starting South to-day. I am going to Alabama and Florida. Will be back about the first of April. I am going to use the receipt on this bad weather that the old farmer used on Sassafras sprouts going off and leave it, also the bad roads. Tell Bat Nall he can have a pair of my winter pants if he needs them and if they are too small in the waist that any old widow who has had experience growing a family of boys can show him how to jump a "V" extension in the back.

Yours Truly,
W. S. DEAN.

TO OUR REPORTERS

We had only a few communications from Correspondents in our last issue, due to delayed mails and failure to start them in time. Friday morning after we were out, eight communications were in the office, unused, on account of our failure to receive them in time. It is considerable trouble for one to run news items down, write them up and mail, and then to have them omitted often may appear like labor wasted.

As a rule, if your article fails to appear, you may figure that it was no fault of management of the paper, but a matter of impossibility. We do our best, always, to handle all correspondence and fully appreciate the efforts of all who write for us and extend to one and all our sincere thanks.

Europe Is To Get U. S. Booze Money

What Tourists Will Find Sentiment Against America

London, Feb. 28.—If a million Americans should visit Europe this summer, each person spending an average of $1,000 net, that will mean the transfer of $1,000,000,000 to the eastern shores of the Atlantic, helping materially in balancing the exchange. We find Europe at this time ~~banking up~~ her roomy bank vaults. Preparations for the guests themselves are scant.

Probably half of this billion dollars will be spent on liquor, for most of the hard-drinking, rich old topers of the United States have migrated here or soon will arrive. France has millions of bottles of champagne that must be emptied. Italy's vermouth, Portugal's port and Spain's sherry will cause many an American smack. England has a few thousand barrels of Burgundy and Bourbon whisky that don't sell, unique taste and, therefore, are out of the market. It is reasonable to expect some Bacchanalian orgies in every regular European city this summer.

Europe Out For Cash.

Some innocent souls might expect that Europe even if dissembling would be waiting for the dear Americans, waiting with loving smiles and nervous anxiety to please. She faces ~~tomorrow~~ today with no smiles. The next thing on the program is to collect the dollars of American tourists, and this collection will be undertaken with such vigor that the carefree immigrants abroad will suspect a magic ~~water~~ cleaner has been used. With these first sunny days of early spring begins the open season for American game.

When they are being made dizzy with special scales of prices for Americans, and with American extremes, the happy visitors will hear many foreign sentiments that will astonish and alarm them. They will learn to their astonishment that every expression of sentiment in America has a repercussion throughout the world. Because of Fiume, Italy hates America. France is hostile because of the high cost of living, the rate of exchange and American criticism of generally French imperialism. Belgium does not understand why further loans are refused. The yipping of Irish ~~velvet~~-heeler in America for the purpose of causing an Anglo-American war has done its work in Great Britain, where a dislike for everything American is becoming general.

Europe will tell the tourists they had imagined Mr. Wilson to be the greatest modern times, but had ~~they~~ only made a great mistake. And that Americans had fought gallantly for the last four months of the war, but had dated the four months back to cover the four years when they were enjoying proud, prosperous neutrality. America has all the gold and refuses to help. President Wilson has become a Kaiser and degrades Lansing because he refuses to continue to bow low to the will of a lord and master. The American representatives are withdrawn from the peace conference, presumably by President Wilson, and subsequently after long silence he complies with any decision being made without his sanction.

Now when these million American tourists return home their common experiences will give them a common sense of opinion respecting their old friends and enemies. The effect should be strongly marked in public sentiment in the November elections. It will have one of these two results—either America will be discouraged in having relationships with Europe or she will want to enter the councils of nations if for no other purpose than the cleaning of misapprehensions concerning herself. The second course seems likely inasmuch as the development of American exports will compel an intense interest in the world by the United States.

Everyone agreed that in cases of cuts, burns, bruises and wounds the first treatment is most important. THREE DIRIGIBLE LINES TO BE OPENED AT ONCE

New York, Feb. 26.—Plans for opening of three transcontinental dirigible airship lines for passengers and several small Middle Western lines were announced here today by Charles Ora, head of the Commercial Aircraft Syndicate which is supported by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio.

Mr. Ora declared that he has made arrangements with the Goodyear company for construction of thirty-five ships ten each of six, twelve and fifty-passenger capacity, which will be used on the Middle Western lines, and five ships, having a capacity of 200 passengers, which will be used on transcontinental lines.

The first routes will take in the following cities, he said:

Kansas City, Denver, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, New Orleans, Jackson, Memphis and Springfield, Ill.

The first small ship will arrive here tomorrow and after being exhibited at an aeronautical exposition, it will be flown back to Kansas City, and put into commission.

While no definite tariff rates have been fixed, officials of the syndicate estimated that the cost of passenger travel would not exceed 5 cents a mile.

GOOD YEAR

LINCOLN SHAFT NEARLY FINISHED

Monument Most Magnificent Ever Built; Cost Exceeds $2,500,000.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Standing on the banks of the Potomac River and within a short distance of the Washington Monument and the White House is the greatest and most beautiful monument ever erected to the memory of any man. It is the Lincoln Memorial, a stately pile of white marble, which is nearing completion and which will be dedicated some time this year on a date to be selected by the Lincoln Memorial Commission.

The magnificent edifice is being erected at a total cost of $2,594,000, of which amount $85,000 was paid to Daniel Chester French for the marble statue of Lincoln, which is being erected in the center of the building. The martyred President is portrayed seated. It is said to be the largest image ever undertaken in marble.

The stone from which the statue was carved is Georgia marble, quarried from the hills of north Georgia, and consists of twenty-eight blocks totaling approximately 3,000 cubic feet, each cubic foot of which weighed in the rough, approximately 200 pounds. This perfect sont was shipped to New York where the statue was completed in the studio of the Piccirilli brothers from the sculptor French's model, and from there it was shipped to Washington, where it is now being set up.

Is Thirty Feet High.

The total height of the statue is thirty feet. The statue itself is nineteen feet high and while the pedestal is ten feet high and the plinth is one foot in height. The heroic proportions may be appreciated when it is known that the buttons on Lincoln's coat measure four inches in diameter, while every other feature is in proportion. The head of Lincoln is four feet high.

According to Getulio Piccirilli, in whose New York studio the marble cutting was done, and who is now in Washington superintending the erection of the statue in the memorial, it took the services of twenty high-class marble cutters a year and a half to complete the statue. The model made by French was five feet in height and this model was used by the Piccirilli in measuring the proportions of the marble.

The marble used in the building was quarried from the top of the Rocky Mountains not far from Denver, Col., at a height of 8,000 feet above the sea level. It is known as Colorado-Yule marble. One of the novel features of the structure is the roof, which is made of marble slabs three feet by five feet and only three-eighths of an inch in thickness. This takes the place of the usual glass skylight effect for lighting purposes. It was thought that a more desirable light could be obtained and the beauty of the building could be enhanced at the same time by using marble. But to make the marble serve this purpose it was necessary to resort to the unique experiment of boiling the slabs in huge kettles of white wax for forty-eight hours. The result proved even more satisfactory than anticipated. The light now filters through in an ideal manner.

The only materials used in the construction are marble, granite, limestone, brick and concrete. All of the steps and platforms are made of fine Milford granite from Massachusetts. For the interior floor and wall base, Tennessee marble was used.

The foundation of the memorial is different from that of any building on this continent. It is so solid that all of the soil around it could be washed away by a mighty flood and the building would still remain. This is due to the fact that the foundation extend through the soil to a depth of two feet below bed rock.

The view from the veranda surrounding the building is second to none in all Washington. To the eastward the Smithsonian Institution, New National Museum, Washington Monument, Library of Congress and the Capitol may be plainly seen; to the west looms Arlington and the Virginia hills in all their picturesque grandeur; to the southwest for a long distance is the majestic Potomac leisurely winding its course oceanward.

In other directions may be seen the entire city of Washington.

When this magnificent edifice is formally opened to the public it will be found to be of such a character as to command the admiration not only of all Americans, but of the entire world. Eminent persons who have visited every foreign country unhesitatingly make the assertion that no similar structure can begin to approach the Lincoln Memorial either in size, beauty or location.

Former President William Howard Taft, who dug the first shovelful of earth from its foundation on Lincoln's birthday, 1914, said of it: "It is a fitting tribute to the majesty of the great and kindly man."

A pain in the side or back that catches when you straighten up calls for a rubbing application of Ballard's Snow Liniment. It relaxes the contracted muscles and permits ordinary bodily motion without suffering or inconvenience. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Ohio Drug Co.

As a result of the depletion of our forests, industries dependent upon wood are already going out of business, with the inevitable depressing influence on their localities. 7,000 FARMERS IN KENTUCKY BUREAU

Now that Kentucky has a Farm Bureau Federation, made up of more than thirty county organizations with a combined membership of nearly 7,000, one of the questions before the State today is: "What is this new machinery going to do?"

The purpose of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, organized on a permanent basis at The Seelbach Tuesday and Wednesday by more than 400 farmers representing every agricultural section in the State is "development of Kentucky agriculture."

Not in a narrow sense, as was pointed out by W. C. Hanna, Commissioner of Agriculture, in a talk to the farmers, but "in the very best and broadest sense possible."

The new federation, its aims and its politics, is of vital interest to the State and to the Nation. This was pointed out by nearly every speaker, from J. Lewis Letterle, president of the Jefferson County Farm Bureau, who made the address of welcome, to E. A. Woods, Allen County, who accepted the presidency of the association at its closing session.

J. S. Crenshaw, Cadiz, Ky., who acted as temporary president, said, in substance in making known the reason for organization: "Farmers throughout the country recognize that the individual farmer, although he may be industrious and far-sighted, is without power at many points. So, the new federation purposes to begin where the individual leaves off, and to accomplish by pooling of interests, what is difficult at times, and impossible at other times to do by farmers working separately."

One feature of the convention was provided by an informal discussion held at the conclusion of the regular programme Tuesday afternoon. Temporary President Crenshaw called for county bureau reports. Beginning alphabetically, he went down the list of Kentucky counties, requesting a report from each that had a county bureau.

764 In Daviess Bureau

Interest was intensified. The delegate from Daviess County Farm Bureau reported a membership of 764. This proved to be the largest bureau in the federation. Henderson County came second. Jefferson County Farm Bureau, one recently organized, reported 400 members.

Each representative told of the work being done by his bureau. The main accomplishment so far, it was brought out, has been through cooperative buying. Many instances were related in which this or that bureau had saved money for its members. The counties having fewer members contended with those boasting larger memberships.

The fact that the federation is not and does not intend to be a "price fixing" organization was emphasized. Production will be kept at the highest possible point, it was said. Only in this way, as Mr. Leonard said, can America be brought back to a normal condition.

Commissioner Hanna, in a talk on "Kentucky and Her Future Development," blamed the high cost of living on the number of persons through whose hands pass products of the soil before they reach the consumer. He said that this condition should be changed.

Representatives in Market.

R. W. Hite, St. Matthews, first vice president of the federation, declared yesterday afternoon that this matter would be investigated. While plans for work have been outlined only tentatively, one of the first things to be done will be the establishment of representatives in the various markets of this country.

The price obtained by the producer will be noted. The product will be followed up until it gets into the hands of the consumer. The price that the latter has to pay will be noted, too, and the difference will be found.

"If the margin is found to be too great," Mr. Hite said, "the federation will take some action of its own or some action through the national association, of which the Kentucky federation intends to become a member, to rectify matters."

Then there will be the matter of publicity. The National Association, according to Mr. Hite, is contemplating an advertising campaign that will put the farmer's side of the question of living conditions before the public. The federation in this State will advertise in Kentucky newspapers, each county through its own medium.

Education also will be taken up.

Members of the bureau, Mr. Hite explained, recognize the advantages of the informed agriculturist.

Commissioner Hanna appealed to the farmers in his talk to send their sons to an agricultural college.

Conservation of soil is one of the aims of the federation. Resolutions adopted point out to the farmer his duty as an owner of land.

The tenant system was deplored for the reason that originally the tenant does not realize the responsibility of conserving natural resources.

Good roads also were a subject of discussion. The federation endorsed the bill now before the Legislature which would provide a system of roads connecting every county seat in Kentucky with every other county seat.

"Farmers' wives and daughters attended the convention. Although none took any part in the program, they informally discussed the federation, its plans and purposes, among themselves. Women from other counties were heard to express favor of the action taken here to form a Woman's Auxiliary to the Jefferson County Farm Bureau.

Formed In Open War

Kentucky farmers were told that their organizations gave promise of developing into one of the best in the country by Harry R. O'Brien, Philadelphia, a farm paper writer. Mr. O'Brien said that he had attended conventions held by five State farm bureaus.

James Speed, Louisville, another farm paper writer, yesterday afternoon referred to the federation's initial meeting as "most unusual."

"The farmers seemed to know what they wanted to do," he said, "and did it."

One of the outstanding characteristics of the new organization, according to Mr. Speed, was "the open way in which the federation was formed."

"There was free and open discussion of everything," he said. "The entire organization, its plans and its aims, is most thoroughly American."

Millions Need Pepto-Mangan

In Many Homes Better Health Is Simply a Matter of Better Blood

Pepto-Mangan Improves Blood

COMPOSED OF APPROVED BLOOD. MAKING ELEMENTS—PUT UP IN LIQUID AND TABLET FORM

Are you tired and weak and "blue"? Do you say to yourself, "What's the use of living? What do I get out of life, dragging through this drab existence in this unhappy way?"

You don't feel well and you don't know why you have so little energy to do anything, and you get all tired out before it is done. There are millions in busy America that have such feelings now and then, and they are to be pitied. But there is help. Unless some serious malady is at the bottom of their trouble, a few weeks of Pepto-Mangan will work a wonderful change. Pepto-Mangan puts new vigor into the blood, and the blood is the life fluid. With plenty of rich, red blood coursing through one's body one is pretty likely to feel good and vigorous and be strong and look hearty.

Go to your druggist and ask for "Gude's Pepto-Mangan." Be sure to say "Gude's". If "Gude's" is not on the package it is not Pepto-Mangan. It is put up in both liquid and tablet form. Tell the druggist which you prefer. There is no difference in medicinal value.—Advertisement.

GERMAN FORTRESS DISMANTLED HULK

Berlin, Feb. 14—Helgoland—two years ago Germany's most impregnable barrier against Allied sea power—is today a dismantled hulk of no military importance. The black impervious bulk of the island itself, surmounted by tons of masonry and ingeniously constructed gun emplacements, is all that remains.

Germans concerned in the construction of the fortress declare another seven years' work will be necessary to complete Helgoland's demobilization. Work has been in progress for over a year. All the guns have been dismantled, but the destruction of the harbor works and other fortifications on the island is proceeding.

This stronghold was built at a cost of more than $175,000,000, but its mighty guns fired but once through the war. The British warship Shannon was the target. The island played a negative part in the defense of the German coast, probably because Allied experts agree that it would have been impossible to silence its batteries.

The foundations of the harbor, which is about 800 yards in length and 500 yards wide, consist of huge blocks of concrete. All these have to be destroyed. The ground on which the barracks stand, to reclaim which from the sea a multitude of Germans worked for years at a cost of $5,000,000, is to be returned to the sea. Everything in the defenses of Helgoland is worked by hydraulic power. The water necessary for the defense and sanitary purposes is drawn by huge pumps from fifty feet below sea level. The subterranean galleries, which are electrically lighted, are regarded by military men as "wonder works."

Although the Germans considered that the secret of Helgoland had been kept inviolate, it is now revealed that a British naval officer, posing as an American student, saw all of the fortifications in 1913.

W. S. Tinsley:
Editor Republican—Dear Sir and friend—I presume that you will not renew my subscription to your paper without a request accompanied by a check for the amount, so you will find it enclosed.

You may believe me, one away from home, situated as I am, gets a lot of pleasure in reading the paper from the home country once each week. I know most of the correspondents from the various sections and keep up with the happenings and items of gossip.

California still looks good to me. The climate is inviting and people from the East are coming here by the thousands and buying land. A large per cent of the tourists are buying farm property. It is not so hard to find a coyote or jack rabbit here, but you can't find a vacant house at all. This condition has been brought about by the great flood of people who want to trade mud and icicles for sunsh'ne and flowers, frozen cabbage and potatoes for fresh fruit and vegetables of 1920.

The East is from six to twelve months behind us in the production of fruits and vegetables, yet "Old Kentucky" beats the world for pure, genuine hospitality, there the front door is always wide-open.

As the people in Kentucky did so well by Morrow last fall, I believe he will be considered as fit timber for the presidential ticket by the Republican National Convention. As to myself, I will be easily satisfied, yet my stomach can not digest neutrality as regards the League of Nations, neither can it digest any one who tried to persuade the Republicans to surrender American principles in order to appease the wrath of Woodrow.

Now All You Good Fellows, Come Fill Up Your Pipes

The Velvet tin is twice as big as shown here

IF ever men are "Tom" and "Bill" to each other, it's when good pipes are a-going. If ever good pipes go their best, 'tis when Velvet's in the bowl.

For Velvet is a mighty friendly smoke. Kentucky Burley is the leaf that Nature made for pipes. Wholesome and hearty, honest as the day. And Velvet is that same good Burley leaf, brought to mellow middle age.

For eight long seasons Velvet "meditates" in wooden hogsheads, throwing off the rawness of "young" tobacco—truly "ageing in the wood." Out Velvet comes—cool, calm and generous—the tobacco Nature made good, kept good and made better.

Velvet's sweetness is the sweetness of good tobacco, not "put on" like "frosting" on a cake. Its mildness comes from natural ageing, not from having the life baked out. Its fragrance is true tobacco fragrance, not a perfume. And Velvet makes an A Number One cigarette. Roll one.

As good old Velvet Joe says:

"Fill yo' heart with friendly thoughts,
Yo' mouth with friendly smoke—
An' let the old world wag."

FRIDAY, MARCH 5

During the past few years the Country has not only witnessed enormous increases in wages, but it has likewise seen the greatest reduction ever known in the matter of hours of service rendered. No one desires to see or hear of any man, woman or child working for less than what is fair and right, considered from all angles. But with hours being shortened, or rather with the working day being cut shorter, and the total remuneration being rapidly advanced, how are we to ever get back to earth again? The H. C. L. can't be corrected by that route. We could have increased the pay and made it O. K., but to both increase the day's wage and and at the same time materially shorten the day makes the laborer's product higher and higher, working upward from both ends, you might say. The laborer who has only himself to maintain is of course winner by short hours and a larger pay-envelope, but those who have families to support, those who must purchase in large quantities, the products of other men's toil must, and do, suffer by the process, and thus the whole system is out of joint. Aside from curtailing the unprofitable profits filled from the people by both big and small business, about the only way to reduce is for all of us to do a little more work each day, which would not mean a reduction in wages, but really, it would amount to an increase. The more we produce of the things of every day sale, the cheaper they are apt to be. We live and labor in vain if we turn out no more than our actual needs and that is what we are doing, and no reduction or equalizing with normal standards can be had until we increase production, a matter impossible by working fewer hours.

Custom has much, in fact everything, to do with our way of doing things, or our way of doing nothing at all. We have had a bit of comment upon the article in our last issue with reference to the comparison of remuneration of Ministers and Undertakers in conducting burials and funerals, and most all of the very little said about the short article, has come from Ministers. Our failure to comply with the old adage that the Laborer is worthy of his hire comes from long years of custom. We have, as a rule, had the funeral services of our departed ones conducted by our Pastors, if not by our Pastors it has usually been by some friend of the family and we have, without thinking of the burden placed upon the minister, figured that it was his duty, that it somehow came in his line of work, never stopping to think of the time and labor required in the preparation of an eulogy and discourse to be delivered at the bier of our dead. Neither have we taken thought of the long miles often necessary to travel through, maybe, rain, sleet or blistering sunshine in order that the Man of God may perform the last sad ceremony in honor of the departed, whom we dishonor by our thoughtless failure to justly remunerate our servant, the Minister. He performs the duty as best he can, at our special instance and request, that being the case, it is rather hard for one to understand just why he is not entitled to, and should not receive a reasonable sum for the time spent and services rendered. We can see no excuse for the custom, aside from the fact that Ministers performing these services do not make a charge and send a bill, as they ought to do. Perhaps the fault also lies with the class of persons who conduct funeral services as well as with those who have services arranged for. The case is entirely different with the Undertaker, he makes out his bill just as a groceryman would, and if you don't pay him in a reasonable length of time he sues you and very promptly collects by law. Not one of us would ever think of having a minister perform a marriage ceremony without paying him for it, then why is he obligated to perform a very much greater amount of labor naturally necessary to the conduct of a funeral, for nothing? Let's change the habit, stop taking something for nothing and PAY THE MINISTER that which we justly owe him.

Politics or party affiliation often has much to do with our views on public questions, with many it has all to do, due to the fact that too great a number follow those who are recognized party leaders, and this is not so strange when one takes into consideration how few are the numbers who have accessible records and opportunities for making studies for themselves. We are inclined to take the position of the average client, that is, let the lawyer employed do the scientific thinking for us, which is most generally the average citizen's position upon intricate National questions. We feel that it is our Representatives special duty and business to act for us, hence the layman follows his leader or leaders, frequently without question, but occasionally he rebels and if he follows at all it is without endorsing the course pursued and with much misgivings as to the ultimate outcome, the final result to be attained by a certain line of action—This brings us up to what we started out to say, viz: We have privately talked with a number of the best informed of both political parties, resident of our little section, and we believe that we truthfully state a fact, when we say that those of President Wilson's party, who unqualifiedly endorse the League of Nations, in its entirety just as it was originally made and handed to the Senate, do not amount to as much as twenty per cent of that party. Some have expressed themselves as being against it in any form, while others, many others, do not object, if the reservations are made. To use the language of one of the best informed, he said, "it was like taking a dose of medicine for certain ailments which the Doctor said contained curative properties, but there was also a drug contained in the dose that might kill, the truth was, he did not know just what the result would be, at the same time he probably knew how and where to procure the thing he needed, without the deadly drug, and he would either do that or reject the whole concoction. He would most certainly not take the added risk simply because the man of physics prescribed." Within the last few days we see unmistakable evidence that the Democratic Press would be glad to see the League adopted, even with the reservations. The Louisville Courier-Journal in a considerable section of a very lengthy editorial even admits that it would approve that sort of action upon the part of the Democratic Senators. And why not? Does not a clear majority in the Senate unquestionably stand for reservations? Senator Beckham was one of seventeen Democrats who voted for reservations Monday, as affecting the Monroe doctrine or creed, and that has been, next to article 10, one of the chief bones of contention. We believe we see unmistakable signs of the minority yielding to what, as everybody knows it to be, the majority. We have not been quite able to understand just why all of this abuse should be heaped upon the majority for wanting things just as they wanted them, and that has not been the real case, because many concessions have been made, reservations have been sealed in several instances, and many that members of the majority party were for have been rejected altogether. The group of reservations commonly called the Lodge reservations in fact represents many compromises. Our opinion, it is true, is not worth much, but it looks to us as though the whole thing may be behind us at no distant date, at least out of the Senate, with its approval, in some shape.

Value in a cream separator depends upon the amount and the quality of service to be got out of it.

Because it lasts fifteen to twenty years, the De Laval is the most economical cream separator to buy. Considering its cleaner skimming, easier running, greater capacity and less cost for repairs, the price of the "cheapest" machine on the market is exorbitant in comparison.

THE NORTHERN STATES HAVE ADOPTED THE 56th AUTO-TRACK WAGON

Weber Too Low— or Others Too High?

How Best to Determine Correctness of Price Asked

EITHER the price of the Weber standard-sized auto-track wagon is away too low or else the prices of other wagons are away too high. You can figure it out for yourself by comparison.

For instance, examine some well-known wagon that sells for practically the same price as the Weber and note carefully the ironing of the gears and the distinctive features—if they have any.

Now come over and see us and let us show you the Weber. Compare this wagon, point for point, and size of each piece of wood stock, with the other fellow's product. Note the ironing of the Weber gears—and bear in mind how cheap the other fellow's wagon gears looked in comparison. Note the Weber swivel-reach-coupling that takes all twisting strain off the gears and brakes—and don't forget that this feature was entirely lacking on the other fellow's wagon. Note the Weber Fifth-Wheel that distributes the strain on the front bolster, prevents it from rocking and reduces to a minimum whipping of the tongue, etc.—and don't forget that this feature, too, was altogether lacking on the other fellow's wagon.

A difference of $11.50 to $18.00 in favor of the Weber is apparent nearly always.

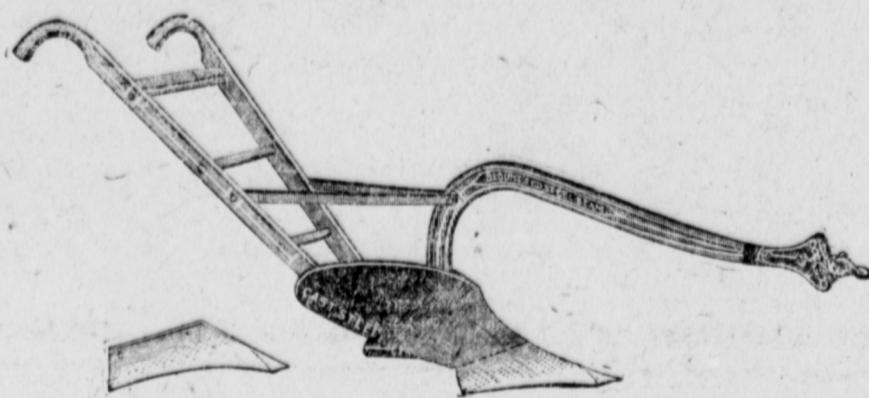

Now then—answer to your own satisfaction the question of whether the price of the Weber with strictly A-grade wheels with high carbon tire, is too low or the prices of other wagons too high, considering quality. And remember—we sell Weber Auto-Track Wagons—the "King of all Farm Wagons."

PLANELESS AVIATION COST U. S. BILLION

Army Air Service Debacle Described In Report To House

The War Department spent $1,051,000,000 for aviation during the nineteen months of the war, with the result that only 213 American-made planes, these all of the H-4 observation type, reached the front, the aviation subcommittee of the House War Department expenditures committee declared in its final report.

The total number of planes with the American forces at the time of the armistice was 740, including 527 bought from the allies, the report states, emphasizing that no American-built combat, pursuit or bombing planes ever reached the front, despite the huge expenditure.

The Wasting of Many Millions

The report is about 50,000 words in length, and charges Secretary of War Baker, and other officials who directed the various branches of aviation work, with responsibility for the failure of the United States to be a factor in the air, and for the "wasting of many millions."

Fatalities among the American air forces were comparatively higher than of any other power, the report says, and declares that inferior planes and insufficient training was responsible.

"The statistics show that in proportion to the number engaged, five times as many American flyers were killed as compared with other branches of the service," the report states. One British flier was killed for every 1,031 hours flown, one Belgian for 930 and one American for 337 hours flown."

The committee strongly recommended the creation of a separate air service.

Service Only On Paper.

"The fact remains," declares the majority report, "that while the American Congress and the people gave ungrudgingly and were beguiled by responsible officials with promises of 20,000 American airplanes that were to precede our American armies to France, when the armistice was signed over 2,000,000 American soldiers had reached France and turned defeat into victory, while America's fighting airplanes and expectations promises existed only on paper."

More than $50,000,000 was spent, the majority report says, in building 4,000 clumsy, dangerous D. H. 4 observation planes, the design of which underwent 3,000 changes. A few of these were shipped to France, where aviators united in denouncing them as fighting ships.

Another $6,000,000 was wasted by the War Department in striving to fit a liberty motor into a type of converted Bristol machines, but the material was later scrapped. Seventeen million dollars additional was tossed away in experiments with training planes, which also were scrapped.

Mr. Editor:—As I have not seen anything from this community lately, will give a few items.

Health in this neighborhood is not good. Some of the sick folks are Gertie Wallace, Maggie Shown, Bertrand Bennett. Many others are complaining with bad colds.

Mr. J. F. Duke sprained his ankle one day last week, but is out now. Mr. Estes Hudson has purchased the property of Currey Wallace, near here, and moved to same. We welcome him to our community.

Owing to continued bad weather farmers are not doing much at present.

We think if the sun would shine for a few weeks health would be better. Will try to tell something new next time.

Why Prune Peach Trees?

Peaches are always borne on wood that grew the previous season. Therefore, after a peach tree reaches bearing age. It is essential so to manage it as to induce a fairly liberal growth each season.

As a general proposition, very heavy pruning will induce a correspondingly large amount of new wood growth. It follows that the weaker-growing varieties should be pruned more heavily than the very strong-growing sorts.

The growing of an open-headed tree is not merely a matter of keeping the top well thinned out. The position of the branches can be controlled and directed to a marked extent by the manner in which the pruning is done.

Heading in a tree from year to year, and pruning with a view to producing an open, spreading, low-top results not only in the development of strong, stocky limbs well able to sustain heavy loads of fruit, but it brings a large proportion of the top near the ground where much of the fruit can be harvested without the use of stepladders.

The man who prunes a fruit tree during its first years must have a pretty clear conception of what the tree is to look like when it reaches maturity, and he needs to know from the beginning what is necessary each time it is pruned in order to develop the tree which forms his mental vision. A well-formed plan, based on a knowledge of the underlying principles of pruning, is essential if the operation is to be anything more than a haphazard removal of branches that appear to be in the way.

DROPS HIS RESOLUTION FELICITATING WILSON

Atlantic City, N. J.—Senator S. Roy Heath, of Mercer county, who introduced in the New Jersey senate at its opening session a concurrent resolution congratulating President Wilson upon his recovery from his illness, said that he would make no effort to secure its passage, and that so far as he was concerned it was buried so deep that it never would be resurrected.

"I introduced the resolution," said Senator Heath, "because I thought it would be a nice testimonial. But the action of the President in the Lansing case has caused me to revise some of my opinions of him, and so far as I am concerned the resolution is dead."

Why Colds Are Dangerous.

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on the greater the danger, especially from the germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The quicker you get rid of your cold, the less the danger of contracting one of these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon.

It is pleasant to take.

Mr. Marion Holcomb, of Nancy, Ky., says: "For quite a long while I suffered with stomach trouble. I would have pains and a heavy feeling after my meals, a most disagreeable taste in my mouth. If I ate anything with butter, oil or grease, I would spit it up. I began to have regular sick headache. I had used pills and tablets, but after a course of these, I would be constipated. It just seemed to tear my stomach all up. I found they were no good at all for my trouble. I heard recommended very highly, so began to use it. It cured me. I keep it in the house all the time. It is the best liver medicine made. I do not have sick headache or stomach trouble any more." Black-Draught acts on the jaded liver and helps it to do its important work of throwing out waste materials and poisons from the system. This medicine should be in every household for use in time of need. Get a package today. If you feel sluggish, take a dose tonight. You will feel fresh tomorrow. Price 25c a package. All druggists.

ONE CENT A DOSE

NO MORE INFLUENZA UNTIL 1921, SAYS EXPERT

Washington, Feb. 26.—With the subsidence of the present influenza outbreak, the world may breathe easily for a while. The next violent epidemic will occur in December, 1921.

This is the conclusion from the investigations made by Dr. John Brownlee, who predicted in the London Lancet last November that there would be a recurrence of influenza in January and February of this year.

Medical authorities of the Public Health Service here say that Dr. Brownlee has probably reduced what is called the "periodicity" of influenza to a known law. Dr. Brownlee's investigations seem to show that influenza occurs at regular intervals of 33 weeks, providing the 33rd week does not fall between June and December, in which case the recurrence might be expected at the end of 66 weeks or 99 weeks.

In other words, influenza is a cold weather infection. The germ which is responsible for it apparently does not thrive in warm or hot weather—or rather it loses its virulent power, or becomes attenuated" as the physicians say.

Same as Grippe Records.

The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co. has checked up Dr. Brownlee's discovery by going over the influenza and pneumonia death records of the United States in a number of selected cities. The result confirms the discovery of the 33-66-99 week showed that the same thing was true cycle. Further, this investigation of the "grippe" records from 1890 to 1893.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound in the ear, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will deteriorate forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circular free. Address, 75c.

OLDEST CONDUCTOR, 89, DEFIES OSLER'S THEORY

Orleans, Ind., Feb. 28.—Defying "Doc" Osler's alleged theorem, John Bills, the oldest railroad conductor in the world, it is said, is still on the job and going strong. At the age of 89 Mr. Bills operates the Monon train which makes three round trips daily between Orleans and French Lick, and he's "spry" for all the four score and nine milestones passed. Besides, he helps out as brakeman whenever the train is converted into an "accommodation," and is frequently seen riding atop the swaying box cars. Mr. Bills has been in the Monon service forty years, and was a pioneer railroader before that. He lives with his wife here.

They couldn't be built now for twice $71,000

When the talk turns from politics to railroads, and the traveler with the cocksure air breaks in with, "There's an awful lot of 'water' in the railroads," here are some hard-pan facts to give him:

American railroads have cost $80,900 a mile—roaded, structures, stations, yards, terminals, freight and passenger trains—everything from the great city terminals to the last spike.

A good concrete-and-asphalt highway costs $36,000 a mile—just a bare road, not counting the cost of culverts, bridges, etc.

Our railroads couldn't be duplicated today for $150,000 a mile.

They are capitalized for only $71,000 a mile—much less than their actual value. Seventy-one thousand dollars today will buy one locomotive.

English railways are capitalized at $274,000 a mile; the French at $155,000; German $132,000; even in Canada (still in pioneer development) they are capitalized at $67,000 a mile. The average for all foreign countries is $100,000.

Low capitalization and high operating efficiency have enabled American Railroads to pay the highest wages while charging the lowest rates.

FARM DEPARTMENT.

Outlaws All Scrub Sires

In Knox County, Tenn., the county council of agriculture is planning a better live-stock campaign and is making arrangements for the total elimination of all scrub sires in the county.

Get Back To Clover.

From the Atlantic to Iowa and from Tennessee to Canada clover is the key crop in rotations, but there is a gradual though steady decline in the culture of red clover in this area. Specialists in the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, are seriously concerned over this decline and urge all farmers to get back to clover.

Less planting of clover has injuriously affected the productiveness of the region and is likely to affect it still more injuriously if something is not done either to increase the acreage of clover or to find a substitute. "Whether a farmer adopts a three, four, or five year rotation," the specialists declare, "he is sure to find that his yields will decline if he does not have clover somewhere in the rotation. Theoretically, of course, it is possible to substitute another leguminous crop for clover, but practically clover fits so well into the agricultural practices of this section that it is the only leguminous crop having any large degree of influence upon keeping up the productivity of the soil."

Live-Stock Associations

Fifty-nine live-stock breeders' associations, with a reported membership of 1,524 were organized during the last fiscal year with the help of United States Department of Agriculture extension specialists. In addition numerous calf clubs were organized among the boys and girls. Much of the work is being done in regions where the beef-cattle industry is practically new.

One of the purposes of beef-cattle extension activities is to eliminate scrub bulls and replace them with pure breeds of good quality. The Federal workers co-operate with the State agricultural colleges through their extension divisions and particularly with county agents.

Angoras Clear Land in Ozarks

The success which has attended the raising of Angora goats in the rugged Ozark country of southwestern Missouri has suggested to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture that it might be equally profitable to place such herds on many other wild tracts, particularly those which have been cut over, because these goats are proving of great help in clearing away underbrush. While growing mohair and producing kids, the Angoras in the Ozarks are also trimming down the brush, manuring the hills, and preparing the way for grass, cattle and sheep.

Some owners of brush lands, not wishing to invest in goats, have paid goat owners from 50 to 75 cents per animal per season to clear the land for them. Thus the herd owners, by renting out their goats, have received good returns for their browsing instead of having to pay feed bills.

In addition to the rental income, good Angora nannies, when properly cared for, are returning an average of 3 to 3½ pounds of mohair and are bearing a goodly number of kids. Well-bred, thrifty wethers, bucks, and young goats are keeping the average of mohair clip up to about 3½ pounds. With mohair selling from 50 to 75 cents a pound and kids valued at $3 to $4 per head, each rented nanny returns from $5 to $7 per year, gross.

According to reports secured by a representative of the State College of Agriculture in Missouri, the number of Angoras required to clear an acre of land varies from 2 to 5, depending on the density and size of the brush. Two years of constant browsing with this number of goats results in absolute destruction of practically all underbrush. In some cases the animals have suffered from continuous browsing in dense undergrowth for so long a period and some goat men are finding it advisable to provide a better range where their animals can feed part of the time.

Causes of Poor Hatch

Poor hatches are common with poultrymen, but what causes them is a much discussed question. The answer depends on a great variety of circumstances. The condition of the eggs previous to hatching is more apt than the incubation to be the cause, although improper handling in either case will produce the same results. When eggs fail to hatch, first see whether the breeding stock is kept under conditions which tend to produce strong, fertile germs in the eggs; next, whether the eggs have been handled properly before incubation; and lastly, whether the conditions were right during incubation.

When an incubator is used a daily temperature record should be kept of each machine. The operator can then compare the temperature at which the machines have been maintained. This may prove of value in the future, especially if the brooder records can be checked back against those of the incubator.

(By Harvey S. Williams.)

This has been another week of churning, choppy grain markets, but the tendency has been definitely downward and about half of the big advance of the preceding week was wiped out. The market is still under the strong opposing influences of small stocks, light receipts and consequent big cash premiums, (due partly to lack of transportation and partly to a holding attitude on the part of farmers) on the one hand, and a conviction which is developing into a certainty that there will be a record surplus of all grain and food stuffs to be carried over into the new crop year, on the other.

The wheat situation is really the most serious and promises to dominate all grain values. In place of the 300,000,000 bushels of wheat which government officials confidently expected to export during the crop year of 1919-20, it now appears doubtful if we will dispose of over 165,000,000 and indications are for a carry over in all positions of between 175,000,000 and 200,000,000 bushels in the new crop year. The Grain Corporation has bought huge quantities of low grade flour for the export trade which they now find themselves unable to sell and are making desperate efforts through a national advertising campaign to sell it to domestic consumers. It is estimated that there are still 200,000,000 bushels of wheat from last year's crops held on the farms in this country and under present transportation conditions it will be a physical impossibility to market this surplus.

Of course, there is a reason for this situation and while it has been self-evident for over two years, it has been persistently ignored in this country. In brief, it is the Argentine surplus which accumulated during the past two years when ocean transportation was absolutely unavailable. Last week's exports of wheat from that country were more than twice the total from the United States and Canada combined, and tonnage is being diverted to Argentine ports now at a rate that promises record-breaking exports from there for several months to come.

We have ignored world conditions because Europe had to be fed and this was the only country who could supply their needs. Now this situation appears changed entirely and naturally world buyers are going into the cheapest markets.

This situation is true not only of wheat, but corn, oats and flaxseed as well, but we have some competition even nearer home on account of the big discount of Canadian under American money. Oats from Western Canada can be laid down at the Atlantic seaboard at from 4 to 5 cents below the cost of Western oats. Export business, which has been so widely advertised, appears to have been largely speculative on the part of seaboard dealers, and instead of the tremendous clearances which had been predicted for January and February the actual shipments have been about the lightest on record.

The provision markets have been even weaker than grains and this, too, in the face of steady to strong markets for hogs. This situation appears peculiar and can only be explained by the fact that industrial activity in this country enables American working men to pay fancy prices for fresh meats. The fresh meat trade has absolutely fixed the hog price all winter, but in the meantime the heavy and rough hogs have gone to a bigger discount under the choice light ones and stocks of lard and dry salted meats in packing centers have accumulated rapidly. The American Meat Packers Association issued a statement during the week that because of the foreign financial situation and the big shipments throughout last fall from this country, further export business during the current season was absolutely impossible and that we would have to base our provision prices entirely on domestic consumption. If the government report showing over 72,000,000 hogs in this country on January 1, was correct there is bound to be a surplus over domestic requirements.

Farmers May not Sell

While the foregoing summary appears very bearish there is another side to the situation. The American farmer is more independent than any other class of our citizens and is in a position to hold his surplus because he considers it more valuable at the price than any other commodity. Farm labor is almost impossible to obtain at prices four or five times as high as those prevailing before the war and independent leaders among the farmers claim that normal production will be impossible while this situation exists. It remains to be seen whether the farmer will stand fast in his determination not to sell his surplus at below what he considers present cost of production.

In one it cost $1 a hundred more to make pork with lice on the hogs than without; in the second, it cost $1.50 more; in the third, $2.94 more. Gains on the hogs free from lice were made more rapidly as well as at less cost. It pays to kill the lice.

Keep Cow Begging.

Farmers and dairymen should read this little clipping from the Southern Agriculturist:

Careful watch should be kept on the feed trough in front of the cow. Good feeding consists in catering to each cow—that is, feeding her the kinds and amounts of feed which will keep her appetite whetted, giving her just a little less than she wants, and keeping her begging for more. Feed should not be allowed to accumulate in the manger to become sour and musty, for this is almost certain to cause digestive disorders and a reduction in the milk yield.

Keeping Sheep For Mutton.

Sheep are not very generally kept on farms for supplying the home family with meat. There are many areas, especially in hilly or mountainous regions, where nearly every farm could keep a few mutton sheep to advantage. Boys' and Girls' clubs in some parts of the country have done much to foster home production of mutton.

Sheep naturally graze over rather wide areas and seek a variety of plants. This habit particularly adapts them to being kept in large numbers on lands of sparse vegetation or furnishing a variety of grasses or other plants, says the United States Department of Agriculture. They do better on short and fine grasses than on coarse or high feed. They will eat a good deal of brush and, if confined to small areas, will do a fair job at cleaning up land. When used in this way they can not be expected to prove very satisfactory in the production of good lambs or good wool.

Keep Consumer's Confidence

The producer dealing directly with consumer must not forget that one shipment of poor produce causes more dissatisfaction than can be overcome with several shipments of high-quality produce, say market experts of the United States Department of Agriculture. Consumers often judge the quality of produce by appearance. Farmers should pack produce so that when it has been transported it will arrive in good condition and present a good appearance. Containers should be suited to the produce shipped and should be durable, strong, and reasonable in price. Much dissatisfaction has resulted from the use of unsuitable containers.

HEADS ODDLY STRUNG

(By I. D. Claire.)

I want to show Flinck that I am not "over up," and because I enjoy the experience, I am back on the job of writing again. In my daily work about the Capitol I literally "walk through marble halls" and meet men distinguished by public character. But amid it all my heart yearns for a dear old town down on the banks of the River Rough, and the association of the best people in the world. It is a weakness of human judgment to esteem too highly those things it has not experienced. The most attractive surroundings in the world become common place, and men in high station are not much different from the common clay of us. And, too, prominence carries responsibilities that are not sunshine and song. The differences among lots of men, men who read and think, is not so great as experience esteems it.

It is not unmindful of the refining influence of association with education and culture, but the man who can realize his ideal of happiness in his solitary researches and meditation is doomed to perpetual disappointment.

The opulence of fortune warranted such a life I should steal away to some quiet spot, remote from the beaten paths of men, and in some desolate cottage, with the kings of literature, like Gibbon and McCauley and Emerson, and those splendid leaders, like the New World Literary Digest and the Hartford Republican, spend the remaining years of my life in undisturbed study and reflection. On occasion, of course, I would want to emerge from my solitude for a season of association with old friends and honored friends, like Gibbons, but never again should I associate with the multitude.

It always seemed to me that most of my friends died when I was away than when I was at home. Perhaps that is due to getting the death reports in groups, in the Republican, in every way it appears that way. One day, I see by the death notices in the Republican, my old and honored friends pass out at the door of death.

Then now I notice mention of the death of my old and faithful friend, Wash Duncan. Wash was truly my friend for more than a score of years, and I can say for him what I can not say for others, white or black, that he was a loyal friend. I was never inclined to trust Wash, even with my life, the last and final test of Wash's faithfulness. In noting Wash's demise I fell to wondering where is he now? It occurred to me the world a bit too contrary to enjoy happiness and maybe had met that measure of responsibility that would warrant his consignment to the other place, so in my prayers for his soul I would ask for him a tranquil and an eternal sleep.

After many months of retiring at three in the morning I am amazed to know what a blessed privilege it is to earn in at my own sweet will. Wash may have been right in saying I was a twelve o'clock man, but I plead not guilty to move the time up three hours later. In retiring now about the meridian hour of the night I say a prayer for Al Anderson and Jim Nance, who still have three hours to work in the Messenger office, and recall with amused interest the mention of that inimitable Shanco Pansy, who said "God bless the man who invented sleep."

I shall always remember with the deepest gratitude the fine courtesy shown me by the management of the Messenger while I was on its staff, but I shall never attempt to conceal the fact that I never came to like Owensboro. However, one little incident marks a reason for regret at leaving. Just before I came to Frankfort, a great and good and genuine citizen came to the office at the hour of midnight and invited me to visit his home. Arriving there I found a great sideboard, especially built into the wall of his dining room. What exposed three hundred pieces of "Old Stone." After entering me till entertainment was no longer either a pleasure or a necessity, he invited me to return as often as I had the time and inclination. Now to be perfectly frank, with you, Wash, he was the only friend I had in Owensboro, leaving whom nearly broke my heart. Frankfort may have much to offer, but if so he has not yet discovered the excellence of my services.

The mountain newspapers are still reporting that old John Shell game on a grand scale.

Why does not somebody report to Luke McLuke that a man named O. H. Murphy lives in the flesh, at Mayfield?

This string of beads is too darned long, slip off a few or carry them over to use on the seventh page next.

week. If you don't like 'em you have got nothing on me, for I don't think they are great snakes, myself.

A party who does not know just how many good people there are down in Ohio county asked me why I took the time to write so much stuff for a local newspaper, and I told him, Be'gosh, I had rather write a column, through the dear old sheet, to the home folks, than to write an essay for the Literary Digest.

What new ventures is Alex Curtis making, and where has Ben Taylor gone, if anywhere, and is Eck Rial still driving the old gray horse, and how high did Dillie Ward get the property listed this year; is the confiscated liquor all gone out of Bratcher's safe, and does Battle Nall still spend most of his time loafing 'round the Republican office, and has the Popcorn King been arrested for beating the income tax, and does Leach the shoe-fixer, loaf out in front of his shop this winter like he did last summer, and—well why in the dickens don't you print the local news, anyhow?

Editor Hartford Republican:

My Dear Sir:—I think it about time to "slip" you a little pay on subscription. I have thought for a long time that I would send you a long and instructive note when I renewed, but I see you only "appreciate" letters from your subscribers but have no room to pass a good thing along.

Now, if you think that you and I. D. Claire have all the oratory bottled up you are in for an awful awakening.

Have you forgotten W. J. Bryan and T. P. Gore, not to say anything about a few lesser lights like me?

I note with pleasure the advancement of I. D. Claire in the field of journalism. There is no way to tell where he may stop, for those old yellow hills of Kentucky have produced some very prominent men; Oklahoma's second Governor, Hon. Lee Cruce "firinstance". But I will not attempt to name them all.

Best wishes to the Republican and all its readers.

Yours truly,

SULPHUR SPRINGS.

The continued bad weather is putting the farmers behind with their work. No oats have been sown and many plant beds not burned, and many that have been burned have not been sown. No plowing done and if the weather man don't hold up soon, everything will come at one time and make planting late and a curtailment of crops instead of speeding up production as has been intended.

Miss Ruth Weller, who has just finished a business course at the State Normal School, at Bowling Green, is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Mary Weller, at Walnut Hill Farm.

Mrs. Roach and her father, Mr. Sykes Brown, and his son, Chester, his wife and baby, of Jingy, have recovered from the flu and are able to be out.

Mr. Ira Young, living on the farm of Baker Bros., near Palo, lost his house and entire contents by fire, one day last week. The fire had not been lighter since the night before, which is a mystery hard to explain.

Every once in a while the oil men get in action in this section, and you would think something was going to happen soon, but the activity dies down and everything seems to be about as dead as ever.

NEAL BROTHERS & HARRIS.

JASPER WARREN BAKER

Fulkerson, of Nelson, for several days.

Jasper Warren Baker was born near Beaver Dam, April 21st, 1846, and died at his home near Beaver Dam, Ky., Feb. 17, 1920. In the passing away of Bro. Baker, one of God's noblemen quits the walks of men. For forty years and more he like Enoch had walked with God and at all times had been an interested co-laborer with Him in the upbuilding and extension of His Kingdom. He was of serene temperament and possessed of a faith that held him steady amid the troublesome scenes of life. He was an ardent Methodist, a consistent Mason, a faithful and affectionate husband, and a careful and patient father. To his friends whom he numbered by all those who knew him, he was ever true. He was generous to a fault and sought to interest himself in all that was worth while in the community where he lived.

He was a gentleman, a Christian gentleman of the olden type. He was a great friend to his pastor and shared with him in all the good things with which the Lord so richly blessed him. Above all he loved little children and they loved him. He was married in 1867 to Miss Anna E. Austin, who preceded him several years ago to their Home on high. To this union were born eight children, of which five survive: Thomas O. Baker, Claud W. Baker, R. Luther Baker, Flavious O. Baker and Mrs. Charlotte Ann Mercer, besides a host of neighbors and friends to mourn their loss. The bereaved family have the sympathy and love of all in this, their hour of bereavement. We laid him to rest on the afternoon of Feb. 18th, in the Old Goshen cemetery, beside loved ones gone on before, after the funeral sermon, in the midst of a host of friends, had been preached from the Text recorded in Hebrews 11:5.

His former Pastor, A. D. LITCHFIELD.
